Conceptualization of places

For a few years now property owners and construction companies have taken a greater interest in urban planning. At the same time, local authorities have become aware of the need to involve external parties when planning for city expansion and development.

Urban planning, architecture, and careful planning of the premises are the foundation for long-term value building. However, it takes a lot of effort to create changes that will last over time.

Here at Altitude Meetings, we have worked with the conceptualization of places since 2015, and we have built a solid knowledge base on our experiences.

We are experts on:

- Leading processes forward
- Connecting stakeholders
- Creating content that will last over time
- Making sure that visions materialize and that development is an ongoing process

From our point of view, it is what's inside a building that accounts for its actual value. Not the building itself. In those terms, planning for the inside structure and activities is as important as constructing the building.

These are some of our more extensive projects:

- STUDIO, Malmö
- Embassy of Sharing, Hyllie
- City hall, Lund
- The Loop, Lund
- Sambiblioteket, Härnösand

Our projects have three things in common:

- focus on meetings between people
- building vivid communities
- sustainability is a keyword

The key to success is the meetings that take place between people. It is most important to have a dedicated person on site who can take a leading role in creating a space for these meetings.
